Trans History Linked! : An Introduction to the Digital Transgender Archive

[Recorded on 1/31/24]

This presentation will introduce the Digital Transgender Archive, an online hub for digitized historical materials, born-digital materials, and information on archival holdings globally relating to trans and gender non-normative individuals and practices. The presenter will discuss what items can be found on the DTA and how we determine what to add to our collection, how those items are organized, and suggestions for how to navigate the site and the additional resources it provides. Additionally, drawing on both his own experience working at the DTA and as a researcher working with items on the DTA, he will discuss suggestions for interacting with the DTA as a researcher.

Learning Objectives:
- Learn what kinds of items can be found on the DTA and how they are selected
- Learn about the additional resources the DTA provides
- Learn what the DTA offers from a researcher’s perspective

Presenters: Leslie Beegle, 2nd year PhD student in the English Department at Northeastern University, and a Research Assistant and Lab Coordinator for the Digital Transgender Archive (DTA)

Inclusive Decision-Making: Navigating DEI Challenges for Effective Systems Change and Personal Growth

[Recorded on 10/24/23]

Empower your decision-making, overcome pitfalls, challenge resistance, and foster resilience on the path towards inclusive change and personal well-being.

Learning Objectives:

- DEI Decision Making: basic components of making decisions through the lens of inclusivity.
- Common Missteps in DEI Systems Change: What are the major pitfalls to avoid when embarking on a systems change process.
- Identifying and Challenging Resistance: What does resistance sound like from others? How do I identify and challenge it in myself and my everyday life?
- Self-Identity and Resiliency: How do I care for myself in the process of DEI and advocacy?

Presenters: Chineny Nkemere & Bethany Studenic, Enlightened Solutions

Strategies for Outreach to Marginalized Populations

[Recorded on 9/20/23]

The dedicated people who work in libraries support their patrons in many ways. Perhaps one of the most important, and least visible, population segments they assist are marginalized peoples. When those in the LGBTQ+ or homeless communities seek out guidance, libraries are there. But if you want to proactively offer services to them, or to BIPOC teens, disabled individuals, and others, how can you reach them?

This session will teach you the basics of outreach communication, then show you how to apply them to get your messages to those in need, even if they don't have email or internet service. These strategies will be especially helpful to those who don't have prior communications training, or who don't have a plan and / or a budget for outreach. Even solo librarians can benefit. Any library worker will leave this session with more knowledge and confidence in communicating with hard-to-reach segments of their communities.

MeckTech: Lessons Learned Through Digital Equity Initiatives

[Recorded on 8/17/23]

Charlotte Mecklenburg Library in NC adopted two major digital equity initiatives in 2021: distributing refurbished laptops to 20,000 adults and building a free WiFi network for a neighborhood with low internet connectivity. We will share knowledge gained, along with outcomes of both projects, during this session. Both projects provided valuable lessons for public libraries interested in digital equity work, from strategic partnerships and staff capacity to legal requirements and considerations for user experience.

Learning Objectives:

- Identify potential challenges and solutions for programs that address digital equity in their community.
- Evaluate potential partnerships that can contribute to the success of digital equity projects.
- Develop a strategic approach to a public library's role in the digital equity landscape.

Presenter: Emery Ortiz, Chief Strategy and Innovation Officer at Charlotte Mecklenburg Library

You've Got Mail: Using Reference Mail Services to Reach Justice-Involved Individuals
[Recorded on 8/2/23]

Without regular access to the internet, many people in correctional facilities turn to libraries for help with their information and research needs. They send questions by snail mail, and this strikingly non-digital endeavor is easy to provide. St. Louis County Library has been receiving letters from people in correctional facilities for decades, but in recent years our service has increased by over 1,000%.

Answering questions via mail to correctional facilities requires a combination of traditional reference skills, modern searching techniques, and special security considerations. This service provides an excellent low-cost opportunity to serve the community and further the fundamental mission of public libraries. Join Megan Phifer-Davis to learn how you can start providing this service and develop procedures and guidelines to prioritize security and safeguard privacy. She'll also explain methods used to expand the service and connecting with other libraries doing this work across the country.

Presenter: Megan Phifer-Davis, Reference Manager at St. Louis County Library

Unlocking Digital Inclusion: Exploring Accessibility and Inclusion on Library Websites
[Recorded on 7/26/23]

Join us for an informative webinar as we dig into the world of online accessibility and inclusion. Learn about key concepts of digital accessibility and address important questions. Don't miss this opportunity to gain valuable insight and practical strategies to create inclusive and accessible library websites. Let's bridge the gap and empower everyone to access the digital world seamlessly.

Learning Objectives:
- What is Accessibility?
- Why is Accessibility Important?
- Who needs support online?
- Accessibility + Usability = Inclusion
- Website Accessibility Statements
- Recite Me - Accessibility on Demand

Presenter: Aaron Van Auken, Business Development Executive at Recite Me

Intergenerational Collaboration: In Diversity, We Trust!
[Recorded on 7/19/23]

The five generations currently represented in the workforce have their own world view and attitude toward work and life. Oftentimes, each generation's unique approach and/or generational stereotypes create friction among individuals and teams. This fun, interactive workshop will explore how unique views of each generation may impact an individual's approach to work, discuss the harmful effects of generational stereotypes, and identify leadership strategies to leverage the collective strength in generational diversity.

Learning Objectives:
- Explore how formative events in generational year spans may impact individual perspective
- Discuss the harmful effects of generational stereotypes in the workplace
- Identify strategies to leverage the collective strength of generational diversity

Presenter: Ellen Procida Fisher, Operations Manager in the Superior Court of New Jersey

Accessibility Initiatives at NC State Libraries
[Recorded on 7/13/23]

Accessibility is having a moment. More than ever, libraries are embracing the reality that if you have users, you have users with disabilities. Making our services, resources, and spaces accessible is everyone’s responsibility, and we all have unique skills to contribute to solving our library’s accessibility challenges. We’ll share what we’ve been doing at NC State University Libraries, from ebooks assessments to sensory friendly maps to squashing 300,000+ web accessibility errors. We hope this presentation will meet you wherever you are on your accessibility journey and give you some ideas about things you and your colleagues might do to make your libraries more accessible for everyone in your community.

Learning Objectives
- Understand why accessibility matters to libraries.
- Identify resources available to begin making your library more accessible.
- Connect efforts at NC State with efforts you could implement at your library

Presenters: Robin Camille Davis & Beth Ashmore, NC State University Libraries

Embedding Inclusive Excellence in an Academic Library: Strategic Planning and Infrastructure Considerations

[Recorded on 1/26/23]

While many of our libraries have issued public statements declaring a commitment to greater diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI), many of us have struggled with how to move beyond words to enacting sustained, anti-oppressive actions. We will look at one library that used a multi-pronged, stepped approach to embed inclusive excellence as a framework in every department. Inclusive excellence recognizes an institution’s ability to succeed is dependent upon how fully it values, engages, and includes the rich diversity of each of its members.

Learning Objectives:
- Participants will learn about approaches to include in a diversity strategic planning process
- Participants will learn about models for infrastructure that create sustainable foundations for ongoing DEI work
- Participants will develop critical questions to ask at their home institutions to ensure long-term sustainability of diversity initiatives

Presenter: Ione T. Damasco (they/them), Associate Dean for Inclusive Excellence, Engagement, and Operations for the University Libraries at the University of Dayton.

Putting It Out There: Diversity and Dewey in Adult Nonfiction

[Recorded on 3/23/22]

This is for new adult paraprofessionals/librarians or staff who may be new to collecting, providing reader's advisory or creating displays for the diverse non-fiction found throughout library collections.

Learning objectives:
- Define and explore the various types of diversity
- Find diversity throughout the Dewey centuries of adult nonfiction collections
- Incorporate diversity into displays, discussions, and programming to promote empathy, equity, and inclusion

Presenter: Ericableu Bartik, Cuyahoga County Public Library

Diverse, Equitable, Inclusive, and Accessible: Putting DEIA into Practice in Your Library

[Recorded on 12/9/21]

Learn about the foundational principles of diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility and how they affect libraries. How is cultural competence and cultural humility applied in your library practice? How can your library work towards becoming more equitable and inclusive of both internal and external customers? What are the roles of managers and staff in working towards positive change across the organization? The presenter will share tips, resources, and sample programs that can be applied in a variety of library settings.

Learning Objectives:
- Learn about cultural competence and cultural humility
- Hear about ways to make your library more equitable and inclusive
- Learn how managers and staff can work towards positive change

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion in Youth Literature
[Recorded on 11/9/21]

All children need to see themselves and people in our world in books. Building an inclusive collection is challenging. It's more than a diversity list. It requires reflection, investigation, exploration, and analysis. Tiffeni Fontno, Head Librarian, Educational Resource Center, Boston College, will talk about diverse collection building, evaluating, and resources to acquire diverse children's literature.

Learning Objectives:
- Evaluating how cultural competency influences book selection and services
- Defining criteria to evaluate diverse children's literature
- Assemble resources to develop a profile for selecting diverse materials

Presenter: Tiffeni Fontno, Head Librarian of the Educational Resource Center at Boston College

Many colleges and universities are (re)affirming their commitment to equity, diversity, and inclusion. To highlight and demonstrate that commitment, all units from across the institution are being asked how they are advancing this work. The development of collections, both print and electronic, is essential in academic libraries. They are also an obvious way for libraries to support these initiatives. Courtney L. Young, University Librarian at Colgate University and a Past President of the American Library Association, will discuss the importance of developing a diverse academic library collection.

Learning Objectives:
- The role of an intentionally diverse collection on a college/university campus
- The importance of diversity collection development statements
- Strategies for building a diverse collection
- The importance of assessing collections for diversity and inclusion

Presenter: Courtney L. Young, University Librarian at Colgate University

Disability 201: Disability in the Workplace: Let's talk about accommodations and boundaries
[Recorded on 8/18/21]

This session will briefly talk about the Americans with Disabilities Act and what the law says about accommodations. Then we will segue into a discussion of what the accommodation process can look like and what to prepare for. Finally, we will discuss boundary setting and tips and tricks to navigating library workplaces with disabilities, especially chronic ones. This session will involve lecture, with a QA to follow, however questions are encouraged throughout the session.

Learning Objectives:
- Overview of Americans with Disabilities Act
- Accommodations
- Navigating library workplace with disabilities

Presenter: JJ Pionke, Applied Health Sciences Librarian at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Disability 301: Recruiting a Person with a Disability: Dos and Don'ts
[Recorded on 10/19/21]

In this session, the presenter will talk about accessibility for people with disabilities during the accommodation process as well as increasing recruitment of people with disabilities. The presenter, a person with disabilities himself, will use personal experience to discuss these issues and will encourage questions throughout his session to elicit a robust discussion rather than a lecture.

Learning Objectives:
- Accessibility for people with disabilities
- Accommodations process
- Recruiting people with disabilities

Presenter: JJ Pionke, Applied Health Sciences Librarian at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Policing In Libraries and the Fog of Implicit Bias

[Recorded on 10/21/21]

Presenters Jarrett Dapier and Dr. Emily Knox will present information regarding how/why to reduce police presence in libraries, how to change white supremacist library policies, and how "the fog of implicit bias" influences who is considered a threat and who is not in our spaces.

Learning Objectives:

- Identify how police presence in the library can threaten patron safety, harm patrons, and cause lasting, unintended and traumatizing consequences for patrons
- See how anticipatory action, preventive practices and expanded resources are needed to avoid future situations that commonly lead to police calls
- To understand how the "fog of implicit bias" clouds judgment with regards to determining who is and who is not a threat worthy of police presence in your library and how to work to unlearn that bias

 Welcoming Transgender Customers
 [Recorded on 3/10/21]

As rights for transgender people continue to be challenged and threatened, Denver Public Library strives to be a welcoming place. Join us to learn how to provide excellent internal and external customer service to individuals at your library. This session will help participants reframe ideas around gender, give them best practices for serving trans customers and colleagues, and end with developing strategies to make their libraries gender inclusive.

Learning Objectives:
- Give empathetic and equitable service to all customers
- Have knowledge of social and legal issues impacting transgender customers
- Challenge assumptions and discuss ways to encourage inclusivity in language and action

Presenters: Bec Czarnecki, City Librarian at Denver Public Library & Adrian Johnson, Library Program Associate at the Denver Public Library

LGBTQ+ Readers' Advisory
[Recorded on 4/1/21]

Join us for a series of book talks on LGBTQ+ fiction and non-fiction for young adult and middle grade readers. We’ll talk about some classic LGBTQ+ titles as well as the newest offerings and examine resources available to provide your own recommendations. We will also talk about the importance of “own voices” books to teens and tweens, allowing libraries to better relate to their LGBTQ+ population and to provide better resources to their communities as a whole.

Learning Objectives:
- Make recommendations to students asking for LGBTQ+ books and feel empowered to booktalk these resources for students who may not feel comfortable asking individually
- Gain familiarity with blogs, message boards, and review sites that focus on LGBTQ+ books and their place in the community
- Understand why it is important to provide “own voices” books to teens and tweens and understand the varying degrees of the LGBTQ+ spectrum

Presenters: Christopher Brackett, librarian at the James Weldon Johnson Community Library in St. Petersburg, FL & Tricia Smith, librarian in the St. Petersburg Library System

Learning does not end in the classroom: Workbooks for self-directed learning about equity, diversity and inclusion

[Recorded on 1/29/20]

While classroom training has an important place in library staff education, learning is extended and reinforced when staff have the opportunity to work through difficult topics outside of the classroom. In order to support staff learning about issues of equity, diversity and inclusion, Multnomah County Library has developed a “Racially Just” toolkit, containing activities staff can use to learn on their own, with colleagues or in their staff groups.

Learning Objectives:
- Recognize some of the indications that an organization is ready to support staff with self-paced learning about EDI
- Describe the process staff at Multnomah County Library undertook to develop self-paced learning about EDI, and how you might modify that process in your own organization
- Access resources to help with your own EDI training efforts

Cataloging is not neutral: improving equity and inclusion in resource description

[Recorded on 3/26/19]

Working toward equity and inclusion in library services is not just the responsibility of public-facing staff. As catalogers and other metadata professionals, viewing our controlled vocabularies and classification systems with a critical perspective can make us more aware of the inherent biases and oppressive language present in those systems. This presentation will discuss the political and social aspects of systems including Dewey Decimal Classification, Library of Congress Classification, and Library of Congress Subject Headings. It will give examples of problematic structures and language, and offer some practical steps libraries have undertaken to improve inclusion and social consciousness in the ways we describe our resources.

Learning Objectives:
- Participants will engage critically with the structural and cultural biases in controlled vocabularies and classification systems.
- Participants will examine specific examples of exclusionary language and problematic arrangement of resources used in libraries today.
- Participants will learn about measures libraries have taken to put critical cataloging into practice.

Presenter: Andrew Clark, Discovery and Metadata Librarian for Simmons University Library

Beyond Rosetta Stone: How Libraries Can Support English Language Learners

[Recorded on 11/28/18]

Providing Library access to English Language Learners (ELL) can be much more than developing your foreign language and ESL collections. Those learning English can have more pressing information needs and all staff can play a part in creating a welcoming environment. Keep ESL patrons coming back (hint, it's not just the free services but the new connections and relationships they make at the Library) and provide programming opportunities for the entire community to engage.

Learning objectives:
- How to effectively welcome the ELL community into the Library using best practices in outreach
- How to engage ELL patrons with staff encounters, signage, relevant programming, collections and volunteerism
- Learn about grant funding and potential community partnerships

ALAO/SWON Innovation Conversation: What We (don't) Talk About When We Talk About Diversity
[Recorded on 1/24/18]

ALA lists “diversity” as one of its 11 core values. Lately, the rhetoric around “diversity” has expanded to include the terms “inclusion” and “equity.” Typically, when we use the word “diversity” we refer to specific categories of identity: race, gender, ability, and sexual orientation, to name a few. As colleges and universities engage in more diversity initiatives, how is the conversation around diversity, equity, and inclusion taking shape? What do we mean when we talk about diversity in academic libraries? What is left unsaid when these conversations take place? Focusing on race, this session will challenge attendees to unpack, rethink and reframe the diversity conversation.
